③ Campus Novel -

The word campus is significant here. It means college or university ground and the word ground does not just mean playground, but the property or land in the possession of the college or university. Naturally the terms 'campus novel' presupposes a novel dealing with education campus and that is the nature of what is known as campus novel. The campus novel as it exists today dates back the sixth decade of the twentieth century. Of course, there are differences of opinion among the critics of the to which novel is the first campus novel.

④ Trans Fiction -

To Trans Fiction means fiction, that is, novel in translation form. Now-a-days a number of novels from English are being translated into Marathi by various translators and are being published regularly. But translation is not a process limited to novel. All type of literature have been translated from one language to another.

Translation is a linguistic process of transferring message from source language to target language. Source language means the languages from which the translation is to be made and the target language is the language in which the message is transferred.

generalization that all languages are complex and are adaptive to the needs of the respective communities and in establishing certain linguistic universals it has also made clear that the languages are not just 'native' although cultures may be pre-native. In language is a language even if it is not native. ling system

Modern linguists particularly in the early phases in the united states received a good

impetus from the attempts of anthropologists to study the culture of primitive people. In both the grammatical and the lexical level

On the another level, linguistics has made a very valuable contribution in the methodology of social sciences. The fact that a man's chief is the master of his culture has already been revealed in the anthropologists and sociologists.

Meaning by sociology and linguistics are getting closer

2. Linguistics and Philosophy:-

Association between philosophy and linguistics and linguistics has indeed been long and very long. The structural linguists ignored meaning because they thought it is too subtlest of philosophy. One of the major concerns of Greek and Roman philosophers was to determine the nature of being and the categories in to which it fell. The language used in the philosopher's community.

Yet there are deep-rooted differences between philosophy and linguistics. The philosopher's concern is with the use of ~~communities~~ language that are common to many communities. Philosophers is interested in the logical structure and the inferential. Hence both these disciplines are getting remote and remote from each other these days.

3. Linguistics And Psychology:-

Linguistics studies human language. Language is behaviour or a cognitive process or both is still a controversial issue. Psychology is the ~~the~~ study of human behaviour and human mind. Hence both linguistics and psychology are ~~not~~ closely related.

Investigations and attempts to find out answers to certain fundamental questions like the following are likely to provide ~~to~~ Does the loss of linguistic skills affect his other skills? What role has memory, motivation, age and aptitude to play in language learning? Linguist and the scientist.

4. Linguistics And Geography:-

Linguistics and geography are also inter-related disciplines. The growth of a new discipline of branch called 'Linguistic geography' stands as a valid evidence to prove our proposition. Geographical conditions, trees, plants, birds, animals, places, mountains, rivers, deserts, etc. In the hilly areas, because of the obstacles created by hills and rivers, the process and a sea-change in language.

Study of the names of persons, places, temples, rivers, mountains, etc. Language also have affected geography. Most of the states in India are founded on linguistic basis. This geography has been changing because of languages. All such facts are of great importance for the linguist. They help him in supporting or rejecting his hunches and describing languages in better way.

5. Linguistics And Literature :-

The relationship between Linguistics and Literature is like that of the hammer and the anvil. Literature of the Sanskrit language. A part of Western Europe, Grammar were drawn up on the basis of literary works, and the linguist has taken over the concepts of metres, rhymes, rhythms, stresses and intonations from literature.

Linguists are concerned with literature language is the medium in which literature is written. Influence on his creativity. All these factors influence his style. Literary artist who enriches a language enormously. Applying linguistics to the study of poetry, of fine arts,
